

Dedication

This edition is dedicated to the memory of

Ousmane Sembène

Senegal

Chadi Abdel Salam

Egypt

I did not hesitate even for a moment to accept the invitation to become the President of Board of Trustees for the Festival's third edition, as its values and aims complies with my personal beliefs, either as an Egyptian citizen as well as a politician. Those beliefs can be concluded in three concepts:

First: the pivotal role that art and especially cinema plays in creating awareness of the human societies. Cinema has this special language, which can express people's experiences in their various dimensions and depth, using sound, picture and other performance techniques. Immersing in the depth of this experience or human situation through this peculiar art enable us to plunge in their secrets and overcome geographical and political barriers between peoples and communities.

Second: Luxor is a place, as well as status. It is a status engraved in the conscience of every human, a cradle of life which was a witness of one of the greatest civilization in the human history. It is also place in the South in which always lives the memory of Egypt's adherence to Africa.

Third: Africa is the virgin Black Continent to which we belong, but alas, we have lost a real connection with it since years.

Festival manifests its viral importance as a significant instrument of the gentle power through which we can overpass geographical and political barriers entering the conscience of the people to create a state of unity on the bases and notions of humanity forming crucial step to return to Egyptian – African connection.

In the end I would like to express my sincere thankfulness as well as respect to organizations of the festival and to wish a pleasant time on the Festival to all its guests.

Dr. Essam Sharaf
President of the Board of Trustees

A WORD FROM Dr. Essam Sharaf

A WORD FROM Governor of luxor

Here is Luxor the city of glory and immortality extends its arms to embrace the events of the 3rd Luxor African Film Festival following the tracing of the two past editions that strengthened its flow that runs with the one river water the African continent .

What is truly magnificent is that the ship of creativity and civilization of the African continent has found a shore on the Nile River of Luxor, after it was decorated with roses by creators, which gave the festival images of beauty, creativity and magnificence.

Here is the torch of African Cinematic pathways is advancing and enlightening African with a futuristic renaissance , which will be recorded by history with respect and appreciation by the whole world... The Luxor African Film Festival will continue to be an annual international event looked upon with love and appreciation ... Luxor will continue to be the meeting place for African people I all patriotic and national events to approximate all the ideas by its creators who are writing verses of pride and glory.

General/ Engineer/ Tarek Saad Eddin
Governor of Luxor

It gives me great pleasure to address you in this impressive brochure of the 'African Film Festival' which is held during the period 18th to 24th of March 2014 in Luxor; city of civilization and immortality. This festival is held in Luxor for the third time after the success it achieved in its two previous rounds.

I am pleased to welcome you in Egypt, especially our friends participating from African countries. I would like to assure you that holding such an important festival in Egypt reflects the fact that Egypt is very keen on strengthening the relations with all African countries besides cooperating in all areas, especially in the field of tourism.

This festival also confirms the fact that Egypt, as a destination characterized by diversity of its tourist products, always capable of hosting important events and welcoming all visitors from all over the world.

Dear Friends,,,

There is no doubt that this festival will have a great impact on enhancing the cultural cooperation between Egypt and the participating African countries, besides drawing the attention once again to the city of Luxor with its outstanding archeological treasures, which are considered the pillar of the Egyptian cultural tourism.

Once again, I would like to welcome you to have a pleasant stay. Please make sure you explore every corner of Luxor. I promise you all an unforgettable tourist experience.

Hisham Zaazou
Minister of Tourism

A WORD FROM Minister of Tourism

A WORD FROM
Minister of Youth & Sports

Let me express endless gratitude and appreciation for each and every individual for their work in the sake of our country and especially for the efforts put in organizing events, conferences, and initiatives, that I suppose, are essential to achieve an overall renaissance of our country in the midst of Egypt's current circumstances.

Luxor African Film Festival is one of these leading projects which, above all, constitute one of the most important sources of cultural, science and art activities taking place in Egypt. The festival is also part of the Country's and society's efforts to work through the depth of Egyptian - African historic connections in diverse fields and especially in culture and arts.

Khaled Abdel-Aziz
Minister of Youth and Sports

We are strongly insisting not be a traditional festival according to standards generally accepted in our country ... but we want to be a real artistic and human bridge with all the artists and free thinkers in our motherland continent.

Based on what we felt of warmth of receiving everything Egyptian across the continent, either arts or history or heritage « ...We emphasize that we are, under any circumstances, a lung for all African arts and artists to breath and a window on all the people of the earth.

We feel that we have touch each others hearts after a long separation...

Long Live Cinema ... It is a cosmic language bringing back Egypt inside the welcoming arms of the loved ones and brings back lovers from Africa to Egypt.

We are a keeping our promise whatever it will cost us of efforts during very complicated conditions...

Independent SHABAB FOUNDATION (IFS)

ISF is a nonprofit organization founded by numerous artists and intellectuals. From 2006 ISF has worked in fields of theater, film, fine arts, culture development and supporting cultural activities of the youths, organizing artistic and cultural events. ISF also established cooperation with many civil authorities and ministries to instill the principle that “culture and consciousness might be expensive to realize, but their absence will be far more expensive later in prospect of increasing reactionary ideas, especially in underserved places such rural areas and slums”.

In addition to events and activities of Luxor African Film Festival that go on throughout the year such as interchange of film-weeks between Egypt and countries from other continents, ISF realized in 2013 variety of cultural events directed to promote independent arts and activate their role in helping ordinary citizens from different regions of Egypt situated away from big centers and among others:

- Re-screening award-winning films of LAAF's second edition in Alexandria and Cairo.
- Egyptian film-week in Mauretania and Sudan. Completion of the construction of Taqat Noor Cultural Centre in Abu Qatata in Bulaq Dakrur, which aims to develop awareness of the people from the margins of society and changing attitude to life of some of them. ISF tries to achieve these goals through performing arts and cinema, puppets, improvisation theater, screening of the independent movies and short awareness films, poetry, singing, workshops conducted by professionals with target group of children from 7 to 15 years old.
- Preparing protocols of cooperation with Egyptian Film Syndicate, Egyptian Cultural Centre in Mauretania, Egyptian Cinema Holding Company, Mauritanian Cinema, Sudan Film Festival, Masqat Film Festival.
- Commencement of building Luxor Cultural, Science and Development Centre World aimed to train youths and adults from Africa in fields as cinema, theatre, radio engineering, IT.
- The Second Independent Arts Season Theatre V supported by cultural production sector and with participation of 40 independent theatre groups, 4 plastic arts exhibitions, 6 art workshops in Cairo, Luxor, Alexandria and Giza.

We're stories

We're rhythms

We're Egypt

Hello,
Aswan is such an inviting place; we can't help but keep going back. If you come for a visit, "Felucca" is a word you'll learn here. It's the name of the white sailboats that carry you on Aswan's unforgettable experiences. You'll be entertained by the rhythms of the Nubian music, which really carries the spirit of this place.
Or, forgo where the Feluccas can't reach, try taking one of the many smaller boats and discover the hidden islands in the middle of the Nile. This should be on your to-do list!

Puppets' Animation via Computer Programs

Dr. Ashraf Mahdy

The famous Opera Aida was chosen as a plot of the workshop for its variety of characters and its peculiarity since its events are taking place in the times of Ancient Egypt. The main theme of the opera is a love story between Aida, the girl with African origins and Radamès, the commander of the Egyptian troops.

Workshop consists of two parts:

First: Ways of designing the characters and their preparation.

Second: Animation via computer programs. Workshop tries to show the way of puppets' animation using computer programs and its features as well as demonstrate merits and disadvantages of this method. The event is also aimed to encourage discussion among young artists about this way and possibilities of its development to foster the field of animation but primarily it focuses on showing different way of puppets animation

About the Chronicles of Egyptian Cinema

By Aly Aboushady

A book translated into French by Abla

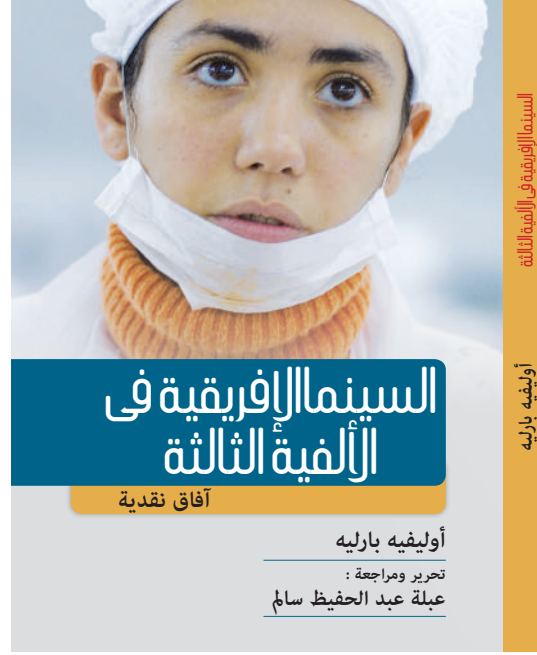

The idea of the book when it was proposed in Paris to create a chronological show of the most important events in the history of cinema in Egypt since the first screening in Tosson Stock Exchange, Alexandria on November 1896, 5 until 1995 as part of celebrations of the Arab Institute of the centenary of the first film screening in Egypt. It was agreed that the book has objective look at facts and events without critical comments following similar methods in the history of world cinema.

While embarking on the implementation, I faced many difficulties due to the scattering of information in dozens of sources, as well as opposing information in different sources and the absence of scientific references so it was necessary to work on researching using a scientific method ... and the book came in the end monitor and document the most important facts and events in the history of cinema in Egypt including films, theaters and directors, and prizes in order to offer a complete panorama about the most important happenings every year depending on cinematic centers and researches by professors who tried to document the information each in his/her fields.

The first edition that was published by the Supreme Council of Culture in 1997 was entitled Chronicles of the Egyptian Cinema in a Hundred Years from 1896 to 1995 was translated into English in 1999. The second edition was published by Damascus Film Festival in 2001 was entitled Chronicles of the Egyptian Cinema in a the 20th Century after adding the years 1996 to 2000, then was the third edition entitled Chronicles of Egyptian cinema 2002-1896, adding two more years and this is the edition which have been translated into French and published by the third edition of Luxor African Festival Cinema 2014

The book is a most important references for researchers and specialized professionals, critics and film lovers in Egypt and the Arab World and Africa.

«African Cinemas of the Years 2000» Book Part two

The first part of this book traces the development of African cinema, from colonization to Afrocentrism, through themes such as the decolonization of the imagination and the quest for legendary African origins. The second part of the book analyzes specific films, particularly through narrative and in terms of their African specificity. Finally, the author explores the social and economic contexts of the African cinema and television industry.

Olivier Barlet

was born in Paris in 1952. He has translated a number of books on Africa and of African authors, and is also the author of different books himself. He is a member of the Syndicat français de la critique de cinéma and has been a film correspondent for Africa international, Afrique-Asie and Continental, and now for Afriscope and Africultures.

He is in charge of the Images plurielles collection on cinema for L'Harmattan Publishing House. His book entitled «Les Cinémas d'Afrique noire : le regard en question», which won the Prix Art et Essai 1997 from the Centre national de la Cinématographie, has been published in the collection and has been translated into English under the title «African Cinemas, Decolonizing the Gaze» (Zed Books, London, 2000), as well as into German and Italian. Olivier Barlet was 2004-1997 Chief Editor of Africultures, an African cultural journal that features a paper edition and a website (www.africultures.com) and is now in charge of the internet development.

He has also written numerous articles on African film for Africultures and in various journals, and is a member of the African Federation of film critics (www.africine.org) through the french Afrimages association. His Books include: Cinema of Black Africa, African Cinemas of the Years 2000.

ETISAL

A PLATFORM FOR A
NEW AFRICAN FILM
MART TO CONNECT
THE AFRICAN FILM
TO THE REST OF THE

ETISAL's mission is to provide to the needs of young African filmmakers in expressing freely their skills and talents through filmmaking and promote their work globally.

African short films is a "life savior" of young filmmakers (Aged between 30-18 of both genders) who are marginalized in terms of production and distribution. Although young filmmakers represent a significant potential for the future of the industry in the continent, funds are not available, During its Second edition in 2013, LAFF organized pre-meetings for ETISAL with producers, filmmakers, festival directors, who recommended setting up a fund for the young African filmmakers, establishing an African Film Mart for promotion and distribution, using modern digital technology and setting up a data base and a digital library for African films.

ETISAL will assist a FUND of 40000 $ to support production of 20 short films during 2014. To achieve the rest of the recommendations, ETISAL aims to establish partnerships with other African film festivals and also with distribution companies and TV channels. Therefore, by supporting production, promotion and distribution of African short films, ETISAL gives equal opportunities to young African filmmakers to promote cultural diversity and freedom of expression thoroughly.

LAFF will add a new program called Space to Establish Partnerships (STEP)
This program is geared to shoulder young filmmakers from the African continent and from the Diaspora, in pre or post-production of their first or second long narrative. STEP will help to finance 5 selected projects.

Colorful Crystal

Emad Abu Garin

The efforts, to revive genuine values and customs as well as the pure spirit, that were lost somewhere between ignorance, hideousness and shapeless, deranged, modern slogans, last

Colorful Crystal is a call to return to our simplicity and the ability to be amazed. This is the second time, after the last year exhibition which accompanied Luxor African Film Festival and largely was in accordance with its aims and values, such as the will to attract ordinary people to form real creative performance based on their thirstiness for art.

The artist uses modes of expression available to him that stretches between rapid drawing, assemblage, live performance and mix of them all to create various performances attractive to audience of simplicity of the Upper Egypt's people. Dynamic in mainly based on improvisation inscribed in some of its parts. At once everything is left for a moment so that the artist can enter into an interaction with the audience, response to their reactions, stimulating them in the performance touching every single of their senses. The music, scent of the place and its light are fused to play a role in this moment and color the shapes and installations from the daily-used materials as cellophane and transparent cloths

The performance changes and modifies under the inspiration of the moment and everyday new thoughts and drawings, made by the audience, are included into it. The aim, which the artist sees in this live performance, that can be shown either inclosed spaces or outside, is always trying to amaze the audience and to pour a charm into their hearts

SOUTH 4

- It is a visual art exhibition about south Egypt from Beni Suef to Qena, Aswan and Nubia. Through light and color it presents beauty of the activities in diversity of habits, customs and traditions. LAFF2014 | TRIBUTES

Daniel Lebern «Danny» Glover (born July 1946 ,22) is an American actor, film director and political activist.

Glover is well known for his roles as Mr. Albert Johnson in The Color Purple, as Michael Harrigan in Predator 2, as corrupt cop James McFee in Witness, as Detective Sergeant Roger Murtaugh in the Lethal Weapon film series (where he coined the catchphrase «I'm too old for this shit»), as Detective David Tapp in Saw, and as George Knox in Angels in the Outfield. He has also appeared in many other movies, television shows, and theatrical productions. He is an active supporter of various humanitarian and political causes.

Glover was born in San Francisco. His parents, postal workers, were active in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), working to advance equal rights.

He attended George Washington High School in San Francisco. He attended San Francisco State University (SFSU) in the late 1960s but did not graduate. SFSU later awarded him an honorary degree.

Glover was in a variety of film, stage, and television roles, and is best known for playing Los Angeles police Sergeant Roger Murtaugh in the Lethal Weapon series of action films.

Danny Glover

He also starred as the husband to Whoopi Goldberg's character Celie in the celebrated literary adaptation The Color Purple, and as Lieutenant James McFee in the film Witness.

In 1994 he made his directorial debut with the Showtime channel short film Override. Also in 1994, Glover and actor Ben Guillory formed the Robey Theatre Company in Los Angeles, focusing on theatre by and about Black people. During his career, he has made several cameos, appearing, for example, in the Michael Jackson video Liberian Girl of 1987. Glover earned top billing for the first time in Predator 2, the sequel to the sci-fi action film Predator. That same year he starred in Charles Burnett's To Sleep with Anger, for which he won the Independent Spirit Award for Best Actor.

That same year he starred in Charles Burnett's To Sleep with Anger, for which he won the Independent Spirit Award for Best Actor.

Activism

While attending San Francisco State University (SFSU), Glover was a member of the Black Students Union, which, along with the Third World Liberation Front and the American Federation of Teachers, collaborated in a five-month student-led strike to establish a Department of Black Studies. The strike was the longest student walkout in U.S. history. It helped create not only the first Department of Black Studies but also the first School of Ethnic Studies in the U.S.

Glover's long history of union activism includes support for numerous service unions and also in the environmental issues.

Danny Glover has been an outspoken critic of the Iraq War before the war began in March 2003.

Flora Gomes

A Bissau-Guinean film director, he was born in Cadique, Guinea-Bissau on 31 December, 1949 and after high school in Cuba, he decided to study film at the Instituto Cubano del Arte y la Industria Cinematográficos in Havana.

Shot fourteen years after independence, Gomes's Mortu Nega (Death Denied) (1988) was the first fiction film and the second feature film ever made in Guinea-Bissau. (The first feature film was N'tturudu by director Umban u'Kest in 1987) At FESPACO 1989, the film won the prestigious Oumarou Ganda Prize. In 1992, Gomes directed Udju Azul di Yonta, which was screened in the Un Certain Regard section at the 1992 Cannes Film Festival.

Son of illiterate parents, as a child Gomes struggled against the limitations of his social status and the oppression of the Portuguese colonial system under António Salazar's rule. He supported Bissau-Guinean resistance against colonialism and greatly admired Amílcar Cabral. He left Guinea-Bissau to study cinema in Cuba (1972) at the Cuban Institute of Art and Cinematography, under the guidance of Santiago Álvarez. He continued his studies in Senegal, at the Senegalese Journal for Motion Picture News, under the direction of Paulin Soumanou Vieyra.

He also co-directed two films with Sergio Pina and worked as an assistant with Chris . Upon returning to liberated Guinea-Bissau, Gomes filmed his country's independence ceremony (24 September 1974), fulfilling the desire of Amílcar Cabral that it should be Bissau-Guineans themselves capturing this historical moment on film. After freeing itself from colonial rule, Guinea-Bissau was visited by many reporters and progressive filmmakers and Gomes, given his knowledge of cinema, was in great demand to assist them, which allowed him to expand his skills Marker and Anita Fernandez

At the end of 1970s, he worked as a photographer and cameraman for the Ministry of Information.

Having first directed historical documentaries, Gomes filmed his first feature film, Mortu Nega, in 1987. Mortu Nega depicts the struggle for independence and the challenges of the first post-independence years in Guinea-Bissau. The film was screened at several international film festivals and Gomes caught the attention of commentators and critics. He was particularly well received in France, which in later years enabled him to attract funding for the production of new films. In 2000, he was distinguished in France with the title of Chevalier des Arts et des Lettres.

Synopsis

In an African small spot hard to find on a map, men are ruled by a political and economic system that they pick by random draw. Bribery and looting are common laws that exhaust people. One day, they decide to run away from their country, scared by the wars they triggered themselves, sickened by the disasters they set off but, above all, leaving their children behind. The young ones will have to take over the country and try to succeed where the adults failed by creating «The Children's Republic».

Souleymane Cissé
Filmmaker
Mali

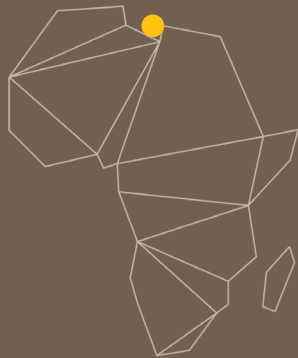

A passionate cinéophile from childhood, he attended secondary school in Dakar and returned to Mali in 1960 after its national independence. His film career began as an assistant projectionist for a documentary on the arrest of Patrice Lumumba. This triggered his desire to create films of his own, so he obtained a scholarship to the Moscow school of Cinema and Television. In 1970, he returned to Mali once more, and joined the Ministry of Information as a cameraman, where he produced documentaries and short films. In 1972, he directed his first medium-length film, Cinq jours d'une vie (Five Days in a Life), which tells the story of a young man who becomes a thief living on the street. The film premiered at the Carthage Film Festival. In 1974, he directed his first full-length film in the Bambara language, Den muso (The Girl), the story of a young mute girl who has been raped. In 1978, Cissé directed Baara (Work), which received the Yenengas Talon prize at FESPACO in 1979. In 1982, he directed Finyé (Wind), which tells the story of Malian youth rising up against the establishment. This earned him his second Yenengas Talon, at 1983's FESPACO. Between 1984 and 1987, he directed Yeelen (Light), a coming-of-age film which won the Jury Prize at the 1987 Cannes Film Festival. In 1995, he produced Waati (Time) which competed for the Palme d'Or at the 1995 Cannes Film Festival. Petr Lom

Born in Prague, he grew up in Canada. A former academic with a PhD in political philosophy from Harvard, Lom focused on directing and producing documentaries starting from 2003. His award-winning films have been screened at the most prestigious international film festivals (Sundance, Berlinale, Locarno, Rotterdam). His filmography includes Bride Kidnapping in Kyrgyzstan (2004), On a Tightrope (2007), Letters to the President (2009) and Back to the Square (2012), a film about the aftermath of the Egyptian January 24 Revolution (nominated for the Prix Europa).

Synopsis

Four Egyptian young women show their inner worlds in a poetic, intimate and brave way as they search for their own identity and creative voice in the aftermath of the Arab Spring. Most of the material is filmed by the characters themselves, who all worked with the film's directors in a process of collaboration and mentorship over a course of two years. They have found creative ways to express what is hidden within their hearts by speaking of their dreams and desires in an extraordinarily open way and by using metaphors to transform the every-day struggles of their lives into the sublime.
